Master of Science in Medical Writing - Find a New Profession in Medical Writing and Publishing

Univ.-Prof. Mag. Dr. Michael Nogler, MAS, M.Sc.
Medical University of Innsbruck

Wednesday, 23 June 2010, 7.00 p.m.
 Room 50105 / Seminarraum 2 (Bruno-Sander-Haus, 1st floor)

Scientific medical texts are used in several areas of our life. Types and forms of these texts vary widely. They range from general medical information to articles in scientific journals – from texts with a strong regulatory and legal background to proposals for scientific grant programs.

The ability to write competitively and successfully is essential for all medical researchers and constitutes a profession of its own for those who are part of a research team as professional medical writers.

The Master Course in Medical Writing can be taken by any person who wishes to publish scientific medical texts. You already have a university-level education in language, literature or the humanities, are fluent in the English language, and wish to make medical writing your new profession.

Univ.-Prof. Mag. Dr. Michael Nogler is professor at the Department of Experimental Orthopedics and Vice Chairman at the Department of Orthopedic Surgery at the Medical University of Innsbruck. Since 2006 he has also been Director of the Bioskills Education “Homer Stryker Center” in Mahwah, NJ, USA and the Head of the Ph.D. study course “Musculoskeletal Sciences.” He has lectured and taught educational courses on navigated knee prosthetics, navigated hip arthroplasty and minimally invasive hip arthroplasty in Japan, USA, Australia, Germany, Italy, and Singapore. Furthermore, he teaches surgery courses on minimally invasive total hip arthroplasty to approximately 200 participants in Innsbruck each year.

Looking forward to welcoming you to this ACI event,
