Winning the White House: The 2008 Election and the Campaign of History

by Professor Robert Schmuhl
 University of Notre Dame, Indiana, USA

Wednesday, 4 June 2008, 6.30 p.m.
 Senatssitzungssaal (old building, 1st floor)

Abstract

“Winning the White House: The 2008 Election and the Campaign of History” will take an in-depth look at the current presidential race in the United States. Historic in itself--this will be the first time two senators will be competing against each other in November--the campaign continues electoral traditions worth considering for a rounded view of contemporary American political life. What will the 2008 election mean not only for the U.S. but also for the world at large?

Robert Schmuhl

Robert Schmuhl is Walter H. Annenberg-Edmund P. Joyce Chair in American Studies and Journalism and Director of the John W. Gallivan Program in Journalism, Ethics & Democracy. He has published extensively in the fields of American journalism and American political life, with titles like The Responsibilities of Journalism (ed., 1984), Indecent Liberties (2000), and most recently In So Many Words: Arguments and Adventures (2006).

Professor Schmuhl has written for numerous popular newspapers and magazines and appeared on well-known television and radio programs in the U.S. and abroad.

Looking forward to welcoming you to this ACI event,
