The American Corner Innsbruck, in cooperation with the U.S. Embassy Vienna and the University of Innsbruck Office of International Economics and Business Studies, invites you to

A talk by noted trade expert Dr. Eliza Patterson, Johns Hopkins University, on “TTIP: The Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership”

Eliza Patterson, an attorney, has worked on international economic law and policy for over twenty years. After graduating from Harvard Law School, she entered private practice, where she represented foreign corporations seeking to trade with and invest in the United States. She entered government service to work for the US Department of Agriculture’s Foreign Agriculture Service, representing the Department in the inter-agency trade policy formation process and helping to negotiate agreements with the EU and Japan. Later, she worked at the International Trade Commission as the special assistant to the Chairman and the Deputy Director of the Office of International Liaison. She has also been a resident scholar at the WTO in Geneva, the Washington Representative for international trade policy for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, and an adjunct professor at several universities and law schools. She currently teaches trade law and international economic negotiations at Sciences Po in Paris during the spring term.
