In the framework of the HistoGenes project a number of sites in Slovenia dated between 4th-11th c. CE were analysed (aDNA, isotopes, 14C). The lecture will present the detected population dynamics against the background of the intensive settlement changes in the late antique and early medieval period.

Tina Milavec is assistant professor for late antiquity and early middle ages at the Department of Archaeology, Faculty of Arts, University of Ljubljana. Her research is focused on late antique hilltop sites, material culture, especially glass, and archaeology of the high mountains.
