WHEN WE ARE NOT REMEMBERED

MICHAEL CRUMMEY

For more than twenty years, Canadian poet and novelist Michael Crummey has been writing about the disappearing fishing culture of his home in Newfoundland, and, by extension, about the fragmentary and transitory nature of all human experience and endeavour. A mix of readings and discussion, his talk will explore the role of memory and loss in his work, and in our understanding of our selves and our communities.

Michael Crummey was born in the mining town of Buchans, Newfoundland, growing up there and in Wabush, a Labrador mining town near the Quebec border. After high school he attended Memorial University of Newfoundland, then moved to Ontario to pursue graduate work in English Literature. He has been a full-time writer for the past 15 years. He moved home to Newfoundland in 1999 and now lives in St. John's.
