Curriculum for the

Interfaculty Master's Programme Gender, Culture and Social Change
at the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences of the University of Innsbruck

§ 1 Qualification Profile and Study Objectives

- (1) The Master's Programme Gender, Culture and Social Change is conducted by the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences with the involvement of the Faculty of Educational Science, the Faculty of Business and Management, the Faculty of Economics and Statistics, the Faculties of Language, Literature and Culture, the Faculty of Philosophy and History as well as the Faculty of Catholic Theology of the University of Innsbruck. The Master's Programme Gender, Culture and Social Change belongs to the group of programmes in social sciences.
- (2) Gender is here conceived of as a category of social structures and processes relevant for all areas of life. Gender has strong interdependency with other social and cultural categories. It is the central mechanism through which gender differentiation takes place with regard to the allocation of social positions, material resources and recognition.
- (3) The Master's programme combines research findings and methods of international gender studies with questions of social, educational, cultural and economic policy in a changing society. Among others, questions of gender-specific and ethnic division of labour, global development and migration, social and political participation, disability and antidiscrimination, women's and human rights and in particular the legal situation of gay, lesbian, bisexual, asexual, transgender, intergender, queer and non-binary (diverse) persons are addressed. A historical perspective on social change is also taken into account. The Master's programme thus serves an in-depth social scientific, economic, and cultural scientific as well as humanistic professional preparation.
- (4) The study objective consists in the complex and theory-guided acquisition of intercultural, difference- and diversity-sensitive, human rights and development policy related competencies by systematically applying a gender perspective. It further consists in the qualified application of these competencies in areas such as educational institutions and the media, in private organisations, in the field of non- governmental and non-profit organisations as well as in public administration and international organisations.
- (5) Graduates dispose of theoretical and methodological instruments for critical involvement in cultures, social structures and subjectivities of postcolonial and post-national constellations, in due consideration of different gender regimes (family, demography, social and equality regimes).
- (6) Graduates are able to link social scientific, economic and cultural scientific knowledge in the field of gender studies when analysing postcolonial and post-national societal and gender relations.

They are furthermore capable of independently refining this knowledge and applying it to new contexts and professional fields.

They can autonomously deal with scientific problems by systematically integrating the gender dimension, evaluate scientific knowledge and apply it in new contexts relevant for research. The Master's programme is an innovative basis for a continuing doctorate.

Students are trained to systematically integrate the gender perspective in executive, planning, analytical or consulting occupations in public administrations, companies, continuing education, the media and in other professional fields as well as in responsible positions in transnational governmental and non-governmental organizations and institutions.

- (7) Students acquire methodological skills to comprehend interdependencies of gender, sexuality, world-view, age, disability, body, class and ethnicity as different dimensions of social change and social-structural constructs, and to implement this knowledge in relevant professional contexts. They cultivate gender-sensitive competencies in the areas of inclusion and postcolonial approaches, social, educational, cultural, economic, development and gender equality policy.
- (8) In the individual modules, students are instructed – beyond subject-specific competencies – to acquire additional skills in due consideration of the gender dimension. Special attention is given to team work competencies, rhetorical and presentation skills and the oral and written discussion of complex interrelations. Students are trained to critically reflect acquired knowledge, to specifically refine and renew it.
- (9) Students acquire scientifically grounded gender competencies and thereby enhance their qualification for professional occupations, which are substantially enlarged in their skills through the application of knowledge and methods of international gender studies.

§ 2 Admission

- (1) A prerequisite for the admission to the master's programme is a bachelor degree or an equivalent study programme from an accredited domestic or foreign educational institution at university level. In the case where equivalence is given in principal and only individual supplemental requirements are missing for full equivalence, the Rectorate is entitled to establish equivalence by way of imposing examinations, which are to be taken during the master's programme.
