NANCY HOLLANDER

International Criminal Defence Lawyer, New Mexico, USA

Nancy Hollander is an internationally recognized criminal defense lawyer with Freedman Boyd Hollander Goldberg Urias & Ward P.A in Albuquerque, New Mexico/USA, and an Associate Tenant with Doughty Street Chambers, London/UK. Her practice is largely devoted to representing individuals and organizations accused of crimes, including those involving national security issues. She has also been counsel in numerous civil cases, forfeitures and administrative hearings and has argued and won a high-profile case involving religious freedom in the United States Supreme Court.

Ms. Hollander has also served as a consultant to the defense in a high profile terrorism case in Ireland, has assisted counsels in other international cases and has represented two prisoners at the Guantánamo Bay Naval Base. One client is still in the prison and her other client was recently released from Guantanamo and is now home with his family. She also serves as the lead counsel for Chelsea Manning on appeal. She has been accepted as a lead counsel for the Special Tribunal for Lebanon and as counsel for the International Criminal Court.

Ms. Hollander is listed in the "Top 250 Women in Litigation in the U.S." throughout the last years and was named as one of "America's top fifty women litigators" by the National Law Journal in 2001. In 1992–93, she was the President of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. She received the "Professional Lawyer of the Year Award" from the New Mexico Trial Lawyers Foundation in 2006. In 2007, she was highlighted in "Superlawyers", listing the top twenty-five New Mexico lawyers.
