

① Taking risks is necessary

Almost everyone has, at least once, taken a risk in his life. Whether it is a physical, such as bungee jumping, or it is a mental, like not learning much for an exam, risk, the majority of us has experienced the feeling of a risk.

First of all what is a risk, how would you define it. In my opinion taking risks is a necessary thing to do, to see how far we can go and to realise where our ~~possibilities~~ abilities stop. I have already taken several risks, the last one was about three months ago, I went skiing with my younger cousin and we decided to go through a funpark, in a funpark are lots of jumps and stuff. After a while I thought, that I would be good enough to jump over a really big jump. So I jumped, totally messed up and broke my hand, I even had to have a surgery because of that. However, today I know that I am not skilled enough to jump over really big jumps, ~~but~~ only because of taking that risk.

Certain risks should simply be taken. We need to know where our boundaries and to be able to do that we need to take some risks. Once we have ~~tried~~ risked something we know if we are good enough for that ~~to~~ or we ~~are~~ don't ~~successed~~ make it and ~~hard~~ ~~fail~~ ~~conclude~~ in some way. But not ~~are~~ having success isn't a bad thing, we can learn from that mistake and don't it again.

Risks also need to be taken to explore new things. Inventors always need to take a risk to invent new things. They want to create, discover, find something and you don't know how dangerous it is to see ~~this~~ something no one ever has before.

314

Risk-Taking is something that will have a deep impact on your personality. People that ~~do~~ take risk are prejudiced bossy and strange. But in my opinion taking risk affects your personality in a positive way. A person that takes risks, and also learns from them will be able to set his or her boundaries right, but only if you learn from the mistakes you made.