Online Master's course on Digital Society Research

Digital technology is reshaping social interactions at individual, group, and global levels, bringing both challenges and opportunities. In this course, we explore the societal impact of digitalization through four key themes:

1. Dualism: Digital technology can connect us, but it can also divide us.
2. Authority: How digital platforms influence traditional institutions and power structures.
3. Attention: Understanding this new currency of the digital economy.
4. Abundance: How digital environments differ from anything before.

More information
The course takes place online between 27 October and 12 December 2025. More information can be found in the Aurora Course Catalogue.

Registration
Interested students can send an e-mail to shortmobility@vu.nl and will then receive the online application form. Please make sure to finalise your registration before 14 October 2025. Please reach out to the Aurora representatives at your home university to discuss the possibilities for funding.

Hosted by
Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam

VU VRIJE UNIVERSITEIT AMSTERDAM