ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The University of Innsbruck School of Management – Brand Research Laboratory invites brand researchers to participate in the 4th Brand Camp in the Austrian ski resort of Obergurgl.

The Brand Camp is a 2-day-conference to which participants bring a research project or an inspiring idea for intensive discussion and joint development. The workshop-like character comprising of presentations, discussions, fire-side talks, and social events, and the location in the picturesque Austrian Alps make the Brand Camp an extraordinary conference experience.

The Brand Camp offers the opportunity to share branding insights, to learn about current developments, to work with like-minded colleagues, and to develop ideas and projects that shape future branding and consumer research. Topics of interest include, for example:

- New (not yet fully developed) branding concepts
- Thought provoking branding questions
- Reflections on puzzling branding phenomena and brand-related consumer behavior
- Future directions for branding research
- Novel approaches and research methods in branding
- Quantitative, qualitative, and mixed methods research is welcome

The Brand Camp is conceptualized as a workshop, rather than a conference. Besides competitive paper sessions and spotlight sessions, there will be time to socialize and discuss research interests with fellow researchers. Based on submitted and invited contributions, participants will compose the conference program directly at the Brand Camp.

Authors submit a one-pager (excluding references, 12-point Times New Roman, 1-inch margins) including a brief summary of their research topic and idea, questions to the Brand Camp audience, and three to five topic area codes.
